Domain Registrar Lock: Protect Your Domain from Unauthorized Transfer

Domain Management · https://www.hyyat.com/en/knowledgebase/domain-lock/

> In short: Registrar Lock stops your domain from being transferred to another company without your knowledge. Find it in: Domains → My Domains → click the domain → "Registrar Lock", then click "Disable Registrar Lock" or "Enable Registrar Lock". Keep it on, and disable it only to transfer the domain away.

Registrar Lock, also called Transfer Lock, is free protection for every domain registered with us. While it is on, nobody can transfer your domain, even with the transfer code. It does not affect your website or email, and it does not stop you from changing nameservers or DNS records.

How to turn Registrar Lock on or off

1. Log in to the client area with your email and password, or with the Google account linked to it.
2. Open Domains → My Domains and click the domain you want.

1. In the "Manage" sidebar, choose Registrar Lock.
2. You will see the Registrar Lock Status. Click Disable Registrar Lock to unlock, or Enable Registrar Lock to protect it again.

When should you unlock your domain?

When should you unlock your domain?

Keep it locked

At all normal times
Protects your domain from transfers

Unlock it briefly

Only to transfer it to another company
Lock it again if you cancel the transfer

Unlock it only when you want to transfer the domain to another company, then get the EPP code and complete the order there. If you change your mind, lock it again right away.

No "Registrar Lock" in the menu? Some extensions, such as Saudi .sa domains, do not support lock control from the client area. If you need it, open a support ticket.

FAQ

Does the lock affect my site or email?

No. It only concerns transfers.

Is unlocking enough to transfer?

No. You also need the EPP code, and the owner email must be correct.

I unlocked, then changed my mind.

Turn it back on from the same page with "Enable Registrar Lock".

Can I change nameservers while locked?

Yes. See changing nameservers.
